After further clarification, the agreement made between the U.S. Department of Agriculture (USDA) and the Nevada State Health Division (NSHD) was that NSHD would submit for USDA's consideration information about the outbreak and about the cooked chorizo product that tested positive for the outbreak strain of Salmonella. It is USDA's decision whether to have its Food Safety and Inspection Service trace back the source of chorizo. The information was submitted by NSHD and USDA's decision is pending.
